

Morgellon's – The Possible Result of Transhumanist Experiments

Update 01.04.12

View the Author's response to YouTube review of this article:

<https://timenolonger.wordpress.com/2012/01/04/video-response-to-morgellons-the-possible-result-of-transhumanist-experiments/>

If you have never heard of Morgellon's disease, it is no wonder – but if you live with it, you live with a nightmare that is not only a horror because of the physical damage which is done to you, but because there is a good chance that no one, including doctors will recognize the fact that you are physically ill.

This strange disease has only recently begun to affect great numbers of people and the numbers are growing. Perhaps this is, by itself, an odd kind of blessing for those suffering from it, since greater numbers mean greater attention and recognition of the problem.

Those with Morgellon's often begin their experience with the disease having a sub-dermal itching which will not subside, feeling as if something is crawling beneath the skin. Usually next it will be noticed that strange, tiny fibers of various colors (red, blue, green, yellow) are pushing their way through the surface of the skin. Later, open lesions develop over the body where the fibers are most present.

Even though the medical field is known for loving to invent new diseases and designating everything under the sun as some kind of illness, (obesity, addiction, restless legs) this is one disease they refuse to acknowledge exists.

It should be wondered why this would be the case, and why it should be almost regarded with anxiety by medical practitioners to be cornered with a case of it.

Most mainstream doctors insist this is an ailment which is completely imagined. Below is the testimony of one sufferer's trip to the doctor –

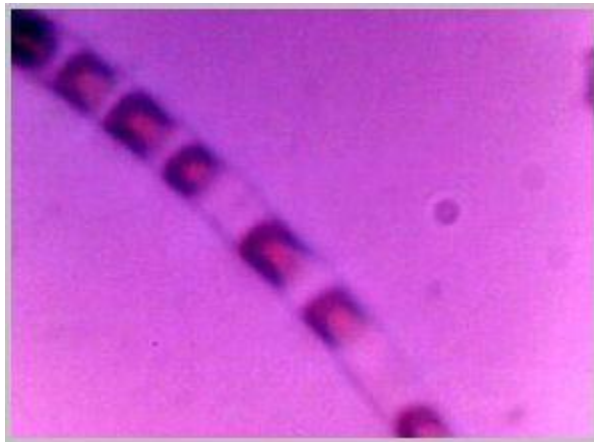

“I'm at a loss. How do I get my doctor to test me? He flatly refuses and when I got upset and took my pants down to show him the backs of my legs/rear end, he took a fast step back and wouldn't touch me or allow tests.

He called in another doctor and together they tried to convince me it was “folliculitis.” I left with a prescription for anti-fungal cream (Fucidin) and Novo-Doxylin (Doxycycline Hyclate)100mg – to take twice daily for one month. The pills make me physically ill (and taste like gasoline so I stopped taking them) but the cream does work temporarily. Any suggestions? I haven't been back because the doctors here are useless.” morgellons-research.org

With no research in the medical field for people to make sense of what this disease is and what can be done to cure it (it is generally considered incurable), people have been left to do their own research and maybe that has not been such a bad thing.

Without the bias of a controlled field of science or the drug-pushing interference of the FDA into research for Morgellon's, people have found they are not as stupid as the establishment tells them they are, and are capable of coming to some helpful discoveries and reasonable theories.

Many suffering from Morgellons have studied the fibers which have come from their bodies under microscopes and have made available the photos of what they found. Usually what can be seen of these fibers is that they are long, segmented strands, looking somewhat like the body of a worm but yet they are not a parasite.

What these fibers are, are hollow Polysaccharide filaments, polymer carbohydrates much like sugars except for the great number of molecules in their chains. Starches are a natural example of a polysaccharide.

Morgellon's sufferers have often noted that they are swarmed by fruit flies and other sugar loving insects. This makes sense since their bodies are infested with polymer carbohydrate strands. In the understanding of a fruit fly, they are a giant, walking piece of fruit.

It might be a great mystery why and how there would come to be polysaccharide strands emerging from people's skin causing lesions or why they would be multicolored, except for a certain piece of very interesting evidence.

When the fibers are analyzed they universally come back positive for the DNA of Agrobacterium tumefaciens. This is a strain of bacteria which is used in the genetic engineering of transgenic crops.

The bacteria serves as a transport which injects foreign genetic material into host cells. It operates first by finding a wound in the host tissue, it then attaches to the cell wall and causes the tissue there to form a gall (in a plant) or lesion (in a human).

Agrobacteria requires a carbohydrate energy source and would benefit from a polysaccharide enclosure.

Thanks to the work of a demonic company named Monsanto, nearly everyone in the United States has eaten genetically engineered food, and it is the goal of this company, aided by the FDA and the government generally, that the only food available are their abominations.

Monsanto was originally a chemical company founded in 1901. Saccharine made from coal tar under the brand name Sweet'N Low, agent orange, aspartame, AstroTurf, plastics, pesticides like DDT, herbicides like Roundup, and research conducted on uranium for the Manhattan Project – besides many genetically engineered species of crops, are some of their achievements.

The effects of genetically modified food on animals who have been fed it have been variously cancer, bleeding stomachs, abnormal blood cell development, deformed liver testicular and pancreatic cells, underdeveloped organs and higher offspring morbidity.

Monsanto is the world's biggest seed developer and they are in the process of doing all they can to eliminate their last competitors. 90% of soy beans and 80 to 85% of all corn grown in the US is Monsanto GMO product.

It is clear to me that Monsanto and GMO engineering has let loose on humanity a pestilence which has the ability to change your own DNA, and so effectively change what you are.

Perhaps the only question to be asked is whether this is intentional or a byproduct of greed and if intentional, why?

It is well known that Monsanto has often been the supposed benefactors of impoverished areas of the world or areas which are recovering from disaster, offering food and seed.

On some occasions such as in Haiti recently, those people have refused to take the "gift", understanding as Americans tend not to, that what those foods are is poison.

There is no doubt that greed is a part of all things the NWO does, and yet we have more than sufficient evidence to know that they are interested in eliminating more than 80 percent of the world's people.

Enough tests have been done with GMO food to understand the results of eating them is genetic mutation and a host of physical ailments, but yet these things are not only on the market to buy, but are dominating it.

It would seem the effect of causing the injection of foreign DNA into the human host is an intentional design of the product. Those affected with Morgellons are largely Rh negative, or carriers of the recessive trait.

This is perhaps due to the acidity or lack of acidity in the bodies of those affected, as Morgellons seems to thrive on an alkaline environment – but is that cause and effect a planned one?

What has also been recorded in tests of Morgellon's fibers is that they begin to produce red blood cells which are not of the host body itself.

It has not been tested to know what the Rh factor of these red blood cells are, but they are clearly manufactured and not products of the human body, as they are perfect in structure, having no natural irregularity of shape.

If there is an agenda to affect Rh negatives particularly, and change the nature of their blood – what would this mean?

The Elite are transhumanists. They believe that not only do they carry a divine bloodline and right to rule the masses as they see fit, but believe in a future where by their technological innovations they can enhance their own DNA and achieve an evolutionary next step, and eventually immortality.

The Rh negative factor being common among them, they might seek to use those of the same blood in the populace as lab rats on which to conduct mass experimentation, while the same methods, instead of producing symptoms of Morgellon's, would simply kill those of an Rh positive blood factor by cancer or immune deficiency.

If Monsanto and GMO crops are allowed to become the main source of food in this country we will see worse than just a few thousand people with debilitating lesions, and perhaps the end result is far more horrifying that most want to imagine.

Source: <https://timenolonger.wordpress.com/2010/06/03/morgellons-the-possible-result-of-transhumanist-experiments/>